This institution had been founded by Speer in 1942 (p.1). All labor representatives were subordinates of the respective chiefs of the territories. Under the military commander was another military administrative office in Paris, President Ministerial Director Dr. Beckner, in Belgium Regierung President Dr. Raeder (p.2)

WAGES

Representatives had to fill the quotas requested as far as possible at a certain fixed wage. (p.5) Sauckel claims that his representatives reported to him whether the contingents of labor could be filled or not. In order to fill these quotas decrees were given to the population as asked for by Hitler and Goebbels (p.6). Labor was recruited chiefly on a voluntary basis thru propaganda and, only if necessary by force. (p.7)

Asked as to the uniformity of the labor laws published, Sauckel replied that all labor laws were published individually by each country (p.9). Dr. Loetsch represented Reichsfuehrer SS Himmler in Sauckel's office.

Sauckel discussed measures taken against eastern workers with Heydrich, who pointed out that the Polish workers were a danger to the inner security of Germany (p.11). Mueller had been present at this discussion (p.12). Actual evacuation of Jews was carried out by State Police (p. 12& 14).
